

BALLOT CLUSTERING ALGORITHMS

KRISTOPHER TAPP

[Joint work with Moon Duchin] We introduce algorithms for clustering the ballots of a ranked choice election, and we demonstrate their effectiveness using data from Scottish elections. More specifically, we employ proxy clustering and slate clustering to analyze voting patterns and detect polarization. Both of these clustering methods turn on some novel metric results about the space of all possible ballots (including short ballots and ballots that allow ties).